In Search of Truth in Mormon Doctrine — One Woman's Quest

Enumclaw, WA — Expecting to be a faithful, lifelong Latter-day Saint, Carma Naylor was surprised when she discovered serious inconsistencies in Mormon doctrine. She questioned her own motives—how could this precious family heritage be false? The story of Carma's initial quest for truth was published in 2006. The “rest of the story” of her difficult journey from deeply entrenched Mormonism to sincere Christianity is now available in A Mormon's Unexpected Journey, Volume II, Finding the Grace I Never Knew.

From a long line of Mormon pioneers, Carma Naylor learned Mormonism well from church and her father. Because of his powerful, spiritual experiences she hung on his every word. She eventually gained her own testimony of the Book of Mormon. Carma fulfilled a mission to New Zealand, attended BYU, married in the Salt Lake Temple, and attended the temple for nineteen years. Her wish to help a Jewish friend find the truth from the Bible compelled her to question those beliefs and she found that Christianity—not Mormonism—had the answers.

This dynamic, personal story is also a powerful study tool that compares Mormon doctrine with biblical Christianity through real-life dialogues and specific references to LDS scriptures and the Holy Bible. Mrs. Naylor also reveals details of secret Mormon ceremonies in an attempt to free those held captive by those beliefs that they might find true freedom in Christ. Pastor Chuck Smith, Founder, Calvary Chapel Movement, says Carma's book is “. . . a must read for any who have wondered what Mormonism is all about.”
